

Team Reflection

I think working alone on this project made it a lot simpler for me to work on and get done. At the beginning I was not sure what kind of project I wanted to do but I knew I did not want to create something I alone wouldn't be able to complete. Finding hireable contributors in a repository was somewhere in between creating an easy project and a difficult one. Though it did have its challenges I did learn a lot about open source software, deployment servers, jupyter notebooks, python, so much more. If I were to continue with this project I would add the functionality to easily select which repositories to search through and compare them.